

Our 2017 Alumni survey statistics are compiled from 74 responses to our open call. The respondents studied with us over a variety of courses, including our Master's Degree in Development Policy and Practice, Emerging African Leaders Programme, LeAD Campus initiative and various short executive courses (Evidence for Policy-making, Poverty and Inequality).

Breakdown by course

MPhil: 24

Emerging African Leaders Programme: 22

LeAD Campus: 5

Evidence Based Policymaking: 8

Other short courses: 8

Countries represented:

- South Africa
- Ghana
- Egypt
- Cameroon
- Ethiopia
- Kenya
- Madagascar
- Namibia
- Niger
- Nigeria
- Senegal
- Tanzania
- Togo
- Uganda
- Zambia
- Zimbabwe

Question breakdown

The course was a worthwhile investment in my career:

To a large extent: 71%
To some extent: 25%
To a minimum extent: 3%
Still studying: 1%

I continue to apply principles in my work:

I have tried with some success: 43%
Often: 55%
All the time: 1%
No: 1%

The GSDPP's name reputation is:

Excellent, but limited circles of influence: 43%
Excellent: 30%
Still relatively unknown: 15%
Good 10%
Uncertain: 2%

My course gave me a valuable professional network:

To a large extent: 66%
To some extent: 27%
Minimum extent: 4%
N/A: 3%

My course led me to implement policies or change attitudes at the level of my professional unit, department, institution or community:

To a minimal extent 4%

To some extent 42%

To a great extent 50%

Currently learning 3%

No 1%

I would recommend my course to others.

No 0%

Perhaps 2%

Only if asked 3%

Absolutely 95%